

GEORGE G. ROBINSON.

Biography from the Lehi Centennial History

George G. Robinson was born October 20, 1869, in Newcastle County, Delaware. He received his education in the public schools. At the age of 16 years he commenced to learn the milling business with McLaughlin Brothers of Newark, Delaware, going to Crosswick, N. J., in 1888 to take charge of a mill for the Eagle Roller Mill Company of that place.

He came to Utah at the request of Bishop W. D. Robinson, arriving at American Fork, Utah, in December, 1890, working for W. D. Robinson upwards of five years, after which he worked for the Chipman Mercantile Company, having charge of their mill at American Fork.

He leased the Lehi Roller Mills in April, 1907, running the same for twenty-seven months. He then returned to the employ of the Chipman Mercantile Company and assumed charge of their mill. In June, 1910, he moved to Lehi and bought the Lehi Roller Mills, also the home of Louis Garff.

He was elected to the City Council for the two year term in November, 1911, and re-elected as the four year term councilman in 1913.

George G. Robinson was married to Beulah Adams, daughter of Joshua and Mary B. Adams of American Fork, January 2, 1894.
